

Patent Lawyer Regina

Patent Lawyer Regina - Our Intellectual Property lawyers understand that for a lot of companies their intellectual property is their most important asset. Intellectual property is an important part in attracting and retaining market share. It defines your company in the market place, whether through trademarks which identify your product, patents which exclude competitors, or copyright that stops unauthorized copying of your intellectual assets.

We have years of skill in the effective resolution and practical management of intellectual property disputes at all levels of the courts. Our clients comprise different businesses, from start-ups to worldwide companies.

Our office believes that the primary concern should be the client's objectives and what is rational from a business point of view. Not every infringement of intellectual property rights automatically warrants a court action. Intellectual property litigation is expensive because of the complexity of detailed analysis of rights and using appropriate experts. Where infringement disputes are straight-forward and simple, disputes often can be solved through negotiated settlements together with built in deterrence terms. In situations where court action is necessary, we use strategies that are compatible with a business-oriented method.

Our lawyers are skilled at acting on behalf of clients in intellectual property infringement claims. Whether you are an owner of intellectual property pursuing infringers, or you need defending against allegations of intellectual property infringement, our litigators have the experience to communicate to the courts the technical issues involved. We give legal advice and representation in disputes connected to trademarks, copyright, patents, industrial design, trade secrets, domain names, interlocutory injunctions ("emergency" relief from infringement awaiting trial) and Anton Pillar Orders (seizure orders and civil search).
