Copyright Lawyer Regina - Today's difficult web of global regulations and laws governing competitive conduct can leave companies facing various corporate compliance issues if sufficient systems to be able to lessen risks are not in place. Consequences can range from hefty fines for alleged price fixing, to jail sentences for executives whose companies have violated antitrust laws. Lawsuits by private people, including class action lawsuits, can result in damage or settlements awards totaling millions of dollars. Our office offers business clients practical recommendation and efficient representation to be able to help them establish corporate compliance systems to maximize their ability to compete lawfully and effectively. Our competition/antitrust lawyers offer expert advice concerning complicated problems that can adversely effect a company's operations and ability to survive.

Our Competition/Antitrust lawyers work in all areas of competition/anti-trust, advertising and marketing law. Our lawyers are frequently asked to speak and write regarding competition law topics for legal, business and academic audiences. We have experience in price fixing investigations, mergers, packaging, product pricing, labeling, distribution and advertising issues. Our litigators have acted for clients before the courts, the Competition Tribunal and the Canadian International Trade Tribunal. Our lawyers draw upon different members throughout our business for skill in trade remedies, intellectual property, franchising and commercial issues related with product distribution. We likewise help in the defence of criminal and quasi-criminal allegations.
